North Dakota Council on the Arts Launches New Online Grant System

The North Dakota Council on the Arts (NDCA) is excited to announce that we are transitioning to a new online grant system. The new system is designed to simplify and expedite the grant application process.

Benefits to the applicant include:

- Ability to apply online at anytime, from anywhere;
- You can work on an application over a period of time - no need to complete an application in one sitting;
- Applicant information is stored forever;
- Manage applications in one place;
- Access historical applications; and
- You can save PDF copies of all applications.

Currently the Institutional Support, Individual Artist Fellowship and Special Project grants are available through the new online system. It is NDCA's goal to have the remaining grant programs online by this spring.

If you are applying for the Institutional Support grant it is mandatory that you complete your application through NDCA's new online grant system. During this transition, you may still have the option to apply for some of the grants via the PDF format, but we strongly encourage you to apply via the new online grant system.

Council staff is prepared to assist applicants with workshops held during the Arts Conference and with technical support. You can access NDCA's new online grant system at <http://northdakota.cgweb.org>. Please call our office at (701) 328-7590, or email amschmid@nd.gov with any questions or concerns you may have.

Celebrating 40 Years of Service!

by Jan Webb
Executive Director, North Dakota Council on the Arts

Happy 40th Anniversary, NDCA! In March of 1967 the NDCA was created by state statute as the state agency to accept funding from the newly formed federal agency the National Endowment for the Arts. We invite you to join us at two March events to kick off our year-long celebration. The first is the biennial statewide arts conference in Bismarck on March 5 and 6. The second is the 2007 Governor's Awards for the Arts ceremony to be held the evening of March 6th. Whether you are an artist, part of an arts organization, an arts educator, or someone interested in what's happening with the arts in North Dakota, please consider joining us at the conference. Come to the Governor's Awards ceremony to celebrate those who have worked hard and long to make the arts happen in our state. At this year's conference you will have the opportunity to attend an in-depth workshop designed and led by Carlo Cuesta of the St. Paul based "Creation in Common". The workshop will deal with audience development, an issue important for all organizations. There will also be sessions regarding ADA and working with people with disabilities, marketing programs that work, a discussion on the insurance needs of artists and organizations, and a luncheon keynote focusing on the importance of the arts in community development. This is an opportunity to meet with peers from across the state and gain some new ideas for doing the great work you do!

This is a legislative year and NDCA's two-year budget will be determined by the state legislature. Governor Hoeven has included an increase of $196,616.00 in the NDCA 2007-09 budget for a total general fund appropriation of $1,196,307. I would encourage each of you to visit with your local legislators regarding your arts programs and how NDCA funds aid them.

This year the NDCA will be working on a new strategic plan. There will be community meetings conducted around the state to gather your input. Please try to attend one and share your vision of the future of the arts in North Dakota and how the NDCA can help make that vision a reality. Information on specific locations and dates will be sent out in early March.

Have a great 2007 and let's celebrate all the arts in North Dakota!

Artist Dyan Rey’s Work Currently Featured in the Offices of the Governor and the First Lady

Dyan Rey

Dyan Rey has been a professional artist for over twenty-five years and has exhibited her artwork in seventeen solo shows as well as many group shows. She has received awards and grants to attend Artist Residency programs. Her work is in many private and public collections.

Dyan was born and raised in Grand Forks. She graduated from Central High School and attended the University of North Dakota. She later attended college at San Francisco State College and the University of Oregon, receiving a Bachelor of Fine Arts in Painting in 1977.

“Untitled” 2006 Oil Pastel

“Tropical Plant # 2” 2006 Oil Pastel

She lived in Seattle for ten years where she actively pursued an art career, exhibiting extensively in the Pacific Northwest where she was represented by the Greg Kucera Gallery. In 1987 she was awarded a seven month residency fellowship at the Fine Arts Work Center in Provincetown, Massachusetts. She remained on the East Coast for the next five years, managing an art gallery in Provincetown and working in museums in New York City, while continuing to paint and exhibit her work.

Upon returning to Grand Forks, Dyan entered the Master of Fine Arts program at the University of North Dakota, receiving her degree in 1996. Her work was chosen to be the inaugural exhibit for the opening of the Empire Theatre Performing Arts Center. She maintains a painting studio in downtown Grand Forks and is a Lecturer in the University of North Dakota Visual Arts Department. She is married to State Representative Eliot Glassheim.

“Untitled” 2006 Oil Pastel

“I like to think of my photography as Found Artistry. I frame and compose my shots of everyday objects and their surroundings, which by themselves seem blended and without significance. In using my eye for patterns, contrast and texture, I strive to turn these objects into a great photograph.

I enjoy the mystery of the abandoned homesteads. In refusing to say goodbyes, they stubbornly stand still. When I walk these hallowed grounds, I am reminded of the families that played and toiled these same grounds. I hope my photos bring some respect and life back into this ban on dreams.”

“In the Garden” 2004 Charcoal

Dyan’s work will be on display for the months of January, February and March. A reception is scheduled for January 22, 2007, from 2:30-4:30 p.m. in the Memorial Hall at the State Capitol building. For more information on Dyan Rey and/or her artwork, please call (701) 772-8840; email dyanre@aol.com; or visit www.dyanrey.com.

Camp Director Retires after 23 Years

By Jill Schramm, Minot Daily News, 9/07/06

It's the music. Joe Alme has no other explanation for his longevity with the International Music Camp. "I guess music would be the bottom line. That's why I do it. It's the music, and it's all that goes with it - the teachers, the kids, the atmosphere."

Alme retired as camp director at the end this summer's camping season after 23 years in the position. He will continue with the camp as chief financial officer through the construction of a new music library, which will include a recital hall, conference rooms and classrooms.

"It's the magic of International Music Camp," Alme said of that draw. "It's a magical place when a serious student and a dynamic and exciting teacher get together. Things connect and both feel very good about being there."

The magic for Alme started in 1963 when he first attended as a student. He worked at the summer camp as a college student. He later served on the teaching faculty and in several administrative positions, including on the board of directors before his appointment as camp director in 1983.

Alme said his predecessor, camp founder Merton Utgaard, had been a genius at building the camp into a world-class organization. He feared he wouldn't be able to keep up and that the camp would falter when he stepped into those big shoes. "It wasn't that way, and I think it's probably because he taught me so well," Alme said. "I was able to build on the reputation he developed." Alme plans to give similar guidance to his successor, Timothy Wollenzien, by maintaining a presence at the camp for a while longer.

Joyce Alme also is retiring after having worked alongside her husband in various roles, including marketing director. Joyce plans to volunteer in the office and to continue to produce the brochures.

Board director Carter Lehmann of Bottineau said Alme never lost the dream of what the music camp could be. "He took something great and made it better," he said. "He put his whole heart into it."

As many as 3,000 students a year have attended the summer camps, which include visual arts, dance, drama and creative writing as well as various forms of music. Students have come from 71 countries, including every state and province in North America. He estimates up to 54,000 campers have attended since he became director.

Alme passes along the directorship of a camp that he says is in the best financial and physical condition ever.

Pottery Road Show

The North Dakota Pottery Collectors Society has developed an educational program called the “NDPCS Pottery Road Show.”

The program provides historical and general information about the major producers of the different types of pottery made from North Dakota clay. These include: University of North Dakota Pottery, Dickota Pottery, Turtle Mountain Indian Pottery, WPA Ceramics, Rosemade Pottery, Ceramics by Messer, Little Heart Ceramics, and Three Tribes Stoneware.

According to NDPCS “Road Show” coordinator Quent Christman, the two-part program includes a visual presentation, and an identification/appraisal session which can be adapted to fit many situations. Volunteer NDPCS members would be present at the one-two hour program.

The NDPCS is inviting organizations to consider scheduling and hosting the Pottery “Road Show.” Details and information about scheduling the event may be obtained at www.ndpcs.org; by email qachr@gra.midco.net or by calling Quent at (701) 775-3265.

Artist Marsha Lehmann’s Work will be Featured in the Offices of the Governor and the First Lady in April, May and June

Marsha Lehmann

Southwestern North Dakota artist Marsha Njos Lehmann now works in oil with a few images in pencil. Her paintings are primarily of ranch life, wildlife and the rugged terrain of the badlands and prairies where she and her husband, Rob, raise angus cattle.

Marsha's cameras show years of wear from packing them with her everywhere. Marsha has documented some changes in the rural lifestyle where she grew up and strives to capture the beauty of her favorite place on earth, the rugged sagebrush covered, blue green pastures and badlands. The subjects in her paintings are from photos she has taken - of ranch life, working dogs with sheep and cattle, horses working and grazing on the prairie, the beauty of the livestock and wildlife together, the life of ranching and farming families, men, women and children in their everyday working clothes at the county fair, rodeos, working and just everyday life.

“Small Adjustments”

Many of her paintings capture a moment in time... a boot on the bumper of an old pickup "Discussing the Weather", a painting filled with images of bucking horses at the oldest rodeo in North Dakota at Killdeer "The Spirit of the Mountain".

For more information on Marsha Lehmann, please visit www.marshalehmann.com. For questions about existing work, to purchase artwork or to schedule a show, please contact Marsha at Prairie Bleu Studio by Phone: (701) 440-0296; Email: prairiebleu@ndsupernet.com; or Mail: Marsha Lehmann, Prairie Bleu Studio, Bowman, ND 58623.

Artist to Artist Workshop Being Planned for Early Summer

Artist to Artist is a powerful professional development experience for North Dakota teaching artists who are on the Artist-in-Residence roster and for classroom teachers.

The workshop, sponsored by the North Dakota Council on the Arts, in partnership with the Perpich Center for Arts Education (Golden Valley, MN) and the Plains Art Museum (Fargo, ND), will be held at the Plains Art Museum in Fargo, North Dakota (date to be announced).

The workshop addresses ways of working in the classroom to focus on students as the center of what we do.

The vision for this workshop is to activate, energize and connect those who are happy to teach and would like to get better at it. Artists and teachers learn from each other, discover mentoring and partnering opportunities with other teaching artists and educators, build bridges to arts organizations and schools, and recognize and replicate good artist-teaching practices.

Artist to Artist was originally envisioned as a community of inquiry in which teaching artists would work together to articulate and refine their practice. As it moves forward this network is expanding to include classroom teachers who want to share strategies and ideas on ways to improve various aspects of the teaching experience.

To learn more about Artist to Artist or to register for the workshop, contact Linda Ehreth, North Dakota Council on the Arts, at (701) 328-7593 or via email: lehreth@nd.gov.

Jan Webb Elected to NASAA Board

Congratulations to Jan Webb, Executive Director of the North Dakota Council on the Arts, who was recently elected to the National Assembly of State Arts Agencies (NASAA) Board of Directors.

NASAA is the membership organization that unites, represents and serves the nation's state and jurisdictional arts agencies. Each of the 56 states and jurisdictions has created an agency to support excellence in and access to the arts.

NASAA's mission is to advance and promote a meaningful role for the arts in the lives of individuals, families and communities throughout the United States. It empowers state arts agencies through strategic assistance that fosters leadership, enhances planning and decision making, and increases resources.

Linda Ehreth Invited to Work with Minnesota Team of Teaching Artists and Educators

A new opportunity has come the way of the Perpich Center for Arts Education and its support of the Artist to Artist network. Eric Booth, founding editor of the Teaching Artist Journal (TAJ), was so impressed by the Artist to Artist network when he visited Minnesota a couple of years ago that he has asked Artist to Artist members to help edit a popular section of the journal called "Resource Roundup."

Resource Roundup is written by a team of volunteer teaching artists and educators from around the country who review new publications that relate to arts in education work in schools, and report on their value to colleagues working in this field. Becca Barniskis, Independent Minnesota Teaching Artist, Poet, and Writer will manage and coordinate details, deadlines, and reviewers.

Linda Ehreth, Arts Education Director for the North Dakota Council on the Arts, has been selected to work with the Minnesota team of teaching artists and educators on a quarterly basis to:

- Share Teaching Artist resources suitable for review
- Come up with new ideas for the Resource Roundup section, and
- Be a part of the further refinement of what and who the Artist to Artist network is.

What an exciting opportunity. Congratulations Linda!

After the ceremony everyone walked around the tree to look at all of the new and previously donated ornaments, took pictures with family and friends, and enjoyed cookies and apple cider.

The tree was decorated with ornaments handmade by children, students, artists and craftspeople from all over North Dakota, as has been the tradition since 1981.

North Dakota Arts in Education Documentation Project Spotlight

The purpose of the Arts in North Dakota Documentation Project, conducted by members of the Arts Education Task Force, was to collect stories about successful arts programs in their communities. Stories were collected about individuals, community programs, school programs, regional programs, or any program that the task force members chose to identify.

Reports were collected by the task force members from the following programs: Angels of the Muse (Fargo); Arts in the Schools (Minot); CHARISM Youth Enrichment Program - Arts Segment (Fargo); F-M Area Youth Symphonies (Fargo); Gooseberry Park Players (Moorhead, Fargo, West Fargo); Learning Bank Fine Arts Series (Fargo); Lisbon Summer Art Camp (Lisbon); Ukrainian Cultural Institute (Dickinson); and VSCU Community School of the Arts (Valley City). In each edition of the Prairie Arts newsletter, NDCA will spotlight one of the documentation project reports.

In this edition, NDCA is spotlighting Angels of the Muse. It is the belief of the Angels of the Muse that the performing arts are important to everyone's wellbeing. However, it is also a fact that there are people who do not have the opportunity to experience that which so many take for granted. The populations "Angels" wants to reach are the elderly in nursing homes, all ages that are homeless or destitute, the developmentally and mentally disabled, the young in hospitals, youth in detention or juvenile facilities, and the very young in day care centers for underprivileged children. "Angels" want all people, regardless of their living circumstances to benefit from the healing that the performing arts can provide.

Since January of 2000, Angels of the Muse have provided regular monthly entertainment for Nokomis Childcare Center in Fargo, Churches United for the Homeless, Fraser Hall (a living center for developmentally disabled adult citizens), Friendship and Eventide nursing homes. The plan is to expand the facilities they reach and provide genres of arts entertainment that includes skits, mimes, and comedians as well as music and dance. Those who arrange the performances for "Angels" consists of a Jack Schauer, board president; Elizabeth Arnold, board secretary/treasurer; one other board member and two volunteers. Their task is to find artists to perform and arrange for the performances. These individuals are not paid. The group has secured some funding to now pay the artists (including a recent grant award in the amount of $612.50 from the North Dakota Council on the Arts).

Angels of the Muse is located at 1438 3rd Avenue North, in Fargo, North Dakota. For more information, please contact Jack at (701) 298-8503, or Elizabeth at (701) 235-2683.

Mosaic Foods Accredited by American Culinary Federation

Mosaic Foods recently became accredited by the American Culinary Federation. Mosaic

Foods operates Café Muse by Mosaic Foods at Plains Art Museum, at the original location of 69 4th Street North, and has offerings at several area coffee shops. Café Muse by Mosaic Foods is a partnership between Mosaic Foods and Plains Art Museum, in which the Museum receives a portion of the proceeds for use in its non profit mission. Mosaic Foods is operated by chefs Sara and Eric Watson.

Accreditation by the American Culinary Federation means that all of the cooks at Mosaic Foods are now actually apprentices. Sara and Eric Watson said, "Accreditation by the American Culinary Federation is exciting for us as we are the only culinary business to offer this opportunity in this area. Not only will it encourage longevity of our employees, but will also benefit us as they become more skilled and come up with great ideas of their own."

Café Muse by Mosaic Foods offers noon specials weekdays at Plains Art Museum, along with being the exclusive caterer for events held at the Museum.

More than 90 talented individuals auditioned at regional competitions in Fargo, Grand Forks, Minot and Bismarck this fall. The eight finalists announced advance to compete for more than $10,000 in prizes, including a recording session with Makoche Recording Company, a Grammy-nominated studio in Bismarck. The finals will be held on January 16, 2007 at the FargoDome, the night before Marketplace for Entrepreneurs. The finalists include: Bridget Ertelt, Valley City; Kelli Volk, Sherwood; Rachel Crooks, Grand Forks; Caleb Fritel, Hazen; Shane Parsons, Bottineau; Jillianne Law, Grand Forks; Samantha Riehl, Raleigh; and Sara Laske, Fargo.

"We are looking to shine the spotlight on North Dakota's bright new talents. FY07 Funding to Continue at FY06 Levels by: Thomas L. Birch, Legislative Counsel, National Assembly of State Agencies, 12/12/06

Congress has adjourned for the year and effectively wrapped up appropriations legislation for the 2007 fiscal year, choosing not to complete work on the nine appropriations bills still unfinished. Instead, the lame duck Congress in one of its last acts passed a third continuing resolution carrying FY06 funding levels through February 15, 2007. The new 110th Congress convening in January will simply extend the continuing resolution through the remainder of the year rather than take up the task of passing individually the remaining appropriations bills covering the domestic portion of the federal budget, according to a press release issued jointly by the incoming chairmen of the House and Senate Appropriations Committees, Sen. Robert Byrd (D-WV) and Rep. David Obey (D-WI).

Passage of the continuing resolution means that funding for the National Endowment for the Arts remains at the FY06 level of $124.4 million through FY07, consistent with the President's budget request for the year. It is unclear whether the final continuing resolution will adopt the administration's proposal to cut $3.462 million from Challenge America in order to increase funds for administrative expenses by $1.843 million, for direct program grants by $1.117 million, and for State and Regional Partnerships by $508,000.

The most recent continuing resolution passed by Congress funds programs at the lowest of the House-passed, Senate-passed and fiscal 2006 levels. Byrd and Obey have indicated that some adjustments would be made in the final legislation to provide more money for priorities such as health, education and veterans' medical care which would fall short of the Senate-approved levels and below levels acceptable to moderate House Republicans. However, there is no indication that the arts funding is included for some adjustment upward.

The budget action announced by Byrd and Obey leaves the new Congress free to take up the business of FY08 budget when the President's proposal is sent to Capitol Hill in early February, without the unfinished business of FY07 appropriations still on the agenda. Significantly, the incoming appropriations chairs announced that the final continuing resolution to be passed early next year will not contain any of the earmarked funding for special projects contained in the remaining FY07 spending bills. What's more, the congressional Democratic leadership has placed a moratorium on earmarks until reforms are put in place to create a more transparent process for decisions about funding for legislators' projects.

National Endowment for the Arts Funding Opportunities for Local Arts Agencies

The National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) is interested in projects, regardless of the size or type of applicant organization, that are of national, regional, or field-wide significance; that tour in several states; or that provide an unusual or especially valuable contribution because of geographic location. This includes local projects that can have significant effects within communities or that are likely to serve as models for a field.

An organization may submit only one application under the FY 2008 Grants for Arts Projects guidelines. For most organizations, these categories represent the full range of funding options for the entire year. Applicants should determine the primary goal of their project, examine the purposes and the review criteria of the different categories, and apply to the category that is most relevant to the project. The National Endowment for the Arts will not transfer applications between categories.

Within each field or discipline, organizations may apply through one of the following categories:

- Access to Artistic Excellence: To encourage and support artistic excellence, preserve our cultural heritage, and provide access to the arts for all Americans. An organization may request a grant amount from $5,000 to $150,000. Deadlines: Access to Artistic Excellence 1: March 12, 2007; and Access to Artistic Excellence 2: August 13, 2007.
- Challenge America: Reaching Every Community Fast-Track Review Grants: To support projects that extend the reach of the arts to under served populations. Grants are $10,000. Deadline: June 1, 2007.
- Learning in the Arts for Children and Youth: To advance arts education for children and youth in school-based or community-based settings. An organization may request a grant amount from $5,000 to $150,000. Deadline: June 11, 2007.

Watch for new guidelines to be posted on NEA's web site in January 2007. The expired guidelines are still available for information purposes only at www.arts.gov/grants/apply/GAP07/Locals.html.

Artists and Nonprofit Organizations Encouraged to Register with Dun & Bradstreet

Americans for the Arts is encouraging all artists and arts organizations to get their own free Dun & Bradstreet (D&B) number - or if they already have a D&B number, to ensure that they are accurately coded as an arts organization or artist.

Americans for the Arts developed a new annual research initiative, Creative Industries, that uses D&B data to document the number of arts-related businesses and employees in any geographical region or political jurisdiction. If you don't have a D&B number you are not represented in the data, and the analysis suggests a vast under-representation of nonprofit arts organizations and artists. So SIGN UP AND BE COUNTED as part of this potent visibility and advocacy tool for advancing the arts in America.

To verify your information, or to register for a D&B number, please visit <http://www.dnb.com/us>. For more information about the Creative Industries project, please visit: www.americansforthearts.org/information_resources/research_information/services/creative_industries/default.asp.

Dana Gioia Confirmed for Second Term as Chairman of National Endowment for the Arts

National Endowment for the Arts Chairman Dana Gioia received unanimous confirmation from the Senate reappointing Dana as leader of the NEA, marking the beginning of the chairman's second, four-year term. President George W. Bush sent his reappointment of Mr. Gioia to the Senate Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions on September 30, 2006 where it was also approved unanimously.

Chairman Gioia's tenure at the NEA has been defined by a significant expansion in vision and programming for the agency. He inaugurated the agency's national initiatives, a series of programs in different disciplines that provide excellent and varied arts experiences for audiences across the country. During his tenure, the agency's budget has increased each year. For FY06, the budget is $124.4 million, up $9 million from 2002 when he took office. The chairman has earned the respect of many members of Congress resulting in strong bipartisan support of the agency's work. In addition, he has developed strong public/private partnerships that have brought added financial resources to the agency's national initiatives.

Arts Advocacy Day 2007, March 12-13, Washington, DC

Entering its 20th consecutive year, Arts Advocacy Day is the only national event designed to bring together a broad cross section of America's national cultural and civic organizations. These groups will join hundreds of grassroots advocates from across the country to underscore the importance of developing strong public policies and appropriating increased public funding for the arts.

For more information or to register, please visit Americans for the Arts web site at: <http://www.artsusa.org/events/2007/aad/default.asp>

March is National Youth Art Month

National Youth Art Month is an annual observance each March to emphasize the value of art education and to encourage public support for quality school art programs. The focus of this month is to convey to the public that art education develops self-discipline, self-esteem, and a sense of pride in self-expression. Youth Art Month has been observed nationally since 1961.

NEA Jazz in the Schools

NEA Jazz in the Schools is an educational resource for high school teachers of social studies, U.S. history, and music. The five-unit, web-based curriculum and DVD toolkit explores jazz as an indigenous American art form and as a means to understand American history.

The curriculum is produced by Jazz at Lincoln Center, a not-for-profit arts organization dedicated to jazz, and supported by a $100,000 grant from the Verizon Foundation.

NEA Jazz in the Schools will include a teachers' guide with five curricular units featuring teacher tips, cross-curricular activities, and assessment methods. Each kit also includes student materials, a timeline poster, a CD, and a DVD featuring video and musical excerpts along with all print materials in digital form.

The National Endowment for the Arts and Jazz at Lincoln Center created these new materials to introduce you to the captivating sounds and stories of jazz and to build important connections for your students between the music and our nation's history.

For more information, please visit the NEA Jazz in the Schools web site at www.neajazzintheschools.org.

April Is Jazz Appreciation Month

In music education, April has been designated as "Jazz Appreciation Month" by the Smithsonian National Museum of American History in cooperation with various music education groups and organizations. The purpose of this celebration is to raise the awareness of the public about the impact of jazz on music history, to appreciate the figures of jazz and to encourage young people to become jazz musicians.

To learn more about jazz appreciation month, visit www.smithsonianjazz.org. Lesson plans for middle school students are available at the National Association for Music Education's web site at www.menc.org/guides/jazz/Lesson.html.

The Big Read

The Big Read is an initiative of the National Endowment for the Arts, designed to restore reading to the center of American culture. The NEA presents The Big Read in partnership with the Institute of Museum and Library Services and in cooperation with Arts Midwest. The Big Read brings together partners across the country to encourage reading for pleasure and enlightenment.

Approximately 160 organizations in communities of varying sizes in all 50 states will be selected through two selection cycles to participate in The Big Read in 2007. Approximately 100 organizations will be selected for programming occurring between September and December 2007. The deadline for these applications will be in April 2007. Guidelines and an RFP will be available in February 2007.

National Endowment for the Arts Releases Study on The Arts and Civic Engagement

People who participate in the arts are people who help make communities thrive, according to a study released today by the National Endowment for the Arts. The study, The Arts and Civic Engagement: Involved in Arts, Involved in Life, reveals that people who participate in the arts also engage in positive civic and individual activities -- such as volunteering, going to sporting events, and outdoor activities -- at significantly higher rates than non-arts participants. The report shatters the stereotype that art is an escapist or passive activity, showing instead that it is associated with a range of positive behaviors. The study also reveals that young adults (18-34) show a declining rate of arts participation and civic activities.

The study is the first to measure the connection between arts and civic engagement, which can be defined as promoting a positive quality of life through individual and group activities. This new examination of data is based on information from the 2002 NEA Survey of Public Participation in the Arts, which interviewed 17,135 adults ages 18 and older about their activities in a 12-month period. This latest report analyzes civic behaviors reported by arts participants and non-arts participants. Among the key findings:

*Arts participants volunteer more. Literary readers and arts participants volunteer at more than twice the rate of those who do not read literature or participate in the arts. For example, half of all performing arts attendees volunteer or do charity work, compared with less than 20% of non-attendees. Those who read literature such as short stories, poems, or novels are almost three times as likely to volunteer as non-readers.

*Arts fans are sports fans. Contrary to popular belief, the people who go to theater and concerts are also comfortable showing team spirit at the sports stadium or neighborhood soccer field. People who attend performing arts attend sporting events at twice the rate of non-attendees, and arts participants are also more likely than non-arts participants to play sports.

*Arts participants enjoy the great outdoors. Literary readers and arts participants engage in outdoor activities, such as camping, hiking, or canoeing, at double the rate of non-arts participants. They also exercise at nearly twice the rate of non-readers and non-participants.

*Young adults are less involved in civic life. Over a 20-year period, young adults are reading less literature, attending fewer arts performances, and even listening to less jazz and classical radio. Young adults also are less involved in sports and exercise, and volunteer rates were flat. Over a similar 20-year timeframe, obesity among young adults grew by roughly 10 percentage points (source: National Center for Health Statistics, Health United States, 2004).

"Healthy communities depend on active and involved citizens," said NEA Chairman Dana Gioia. "The arts play an irreplaceable role in producing both those citizens and those communities."

The study shows that arts participants and readers lead more active lifestyles than commonly is perceived, that they contribute substantial social capital to their communities through high levels of charity works and participation in sports and outdoor activities. Further, the study demonstrates that arts participation can be seen as an indicator of civic and community health. Finally, the study reveals that young adults may be particularly susceptible to giving up both artistic and civic activities.

The NEA Research Division issues periodic research reports and briefs on significant topics affecting artists and arts organizations. The Arts and Civic Engagement report, along with the 2002 Survey of Public Participation in the Arts, is available in print and electronic form on the NEA web site at www.arts.gov/pub/index.php.

Plains Art Museum
Features Hands-On African Art & Collaborative Sculpture that Considers
Our Roots

Plains Art Museum presents a hands-on, minds-on exhibition entitled We Are All From Africa in its third floor Gallery 3. We Are All From Africa includes musical instruments, clothing, baskets, personal items and furnishings from the Somali nomadic culture. The exhibition includes a collaborative artwork called Community Colors in which participants add yarns, sticks and wooden beads to the sculpture to signify their own color or area of origin. This exhibition occurs in conjunction with Black Is A Color: African American Art from the Corcoran Gallery of Art showing through January 14, 2007.

Sandy Ben-Haim, curator of education at the Museum said, "Visitors are trying out the musical instruments, modeling the skirts and belts and contributing to the Community Colors collaborative artwork. Our staff photographer is taking pictures of the kids' interactions which will be submitted to National Geographic's Geography Action! program by their North Dakota representative, Julie Costello."

Black Is A Color probes the ongoing dialogue about African-American art and identity. The works address issues that have historically occupied these artists: racial and cultural heritage and identity, history, protest and spirituality. This major exhibition will on ly be in four museums across the United States, including the Corcoran Gallery of Art, Washington, D.C.; Taft Museum of Art, Cincinnati, Ohio; Mobile Museum of Art, Mobile, Alabama; and Plains Art Museum. This is truly a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity for Fargo-Moorhead residents.

“The Disappeared” to Tour Internationally

In March 2005, Laurel Reuter, Director of the North Dakota Museum of Art, Grand Forks, opened an international exhibition titled The Disappeared. At that time the exhibition consisted of eleven artists from Argentina, Venezuela, Chile, Brazil, Uruguay, Guatemala and Colombia. With time, the exhibition has grown to encompass three more artists and several new works.

The Disappeared opened to one of the largest crowds in the Museum’s history. Reuter was able to secure sufficient funding to bring ten artists, the President of the Grandmothers of the Plaza de Mayo of Argentina and the Under-Secretary of Human Rights for the Government of Buenos Aires to the opening. Many of the artists and activists agreed to work with the Museum’s education staff to expand on this experience by speaking with numerous University of North Dakota classes on the subject and their life experiences.

Word of the exhibition quickly spread throughout the United States and caught the eye of other foundations and humanists. Lawrence Weschler, author, former staff writer of The New Yorker and current director of the New York Institute of Humanities at New York University, flew to North Dakota to see the exhibition firsthand.

It wasn't long before the Lannan Foundation of Santa Fe, New Mexico, decided to fully support Reuter’s vision. With the backing of the Lannan Foundation, the North Dakota Museum of Art set out to organize a five-city Latin American tour and a five-city tour of the United States. The international tour opened September 8, 2006 at El Centro Cultural Recoleta in Buenos Aires, Argentina. During the two months The Disappeared was in Buenos Aires, 25,000 people saw the exhibition.

The second opening of the international tour took place on Thanksgiving Day, twenty members of the North Dakota Museum of Art’s Art Odyssey program flew to Montevideo, Uruguay to participate. The Disappeared will be in Montevideo through January 2, 2007 then continue on to El Museo del Barrio, New York, NY, USA; Museo de Arte de San Marcos, Lima, Peru; SITE Santa Fe, Santa Fe, NM, USA; Central Cultural Maticuna 100, Santiago de Chile; The Museum of Modern Art, Bogotá, Colombia; Art Museum of the Americas, OAS, Washington, D.C.; University of Wyoming Art Museum Laramie, WY, USA; and end in Weisman Museum of Art, Minneapolis, MN, USA from October 10, 2009 – January 10, 2010.
